The Thai Elephant Orchestra

Everyone knows animals enjoy listening to music. But do you know some animals play music, too? At the Thai Elephant Conservation Center in Thailand, there's an orchestra with elephant musicians!

The Thai Elephant Orchestra started in 1997. Neuroscientist and musician Dave Soldier was one of the creators of the group. He knew the elephants liked music, and he decided to design special instruments for the elephants to play. Originally, there were five elephant musicians, but now there are 14. They play marimbas, drums and xylophones. These instruments sound like traditional Thai instruments and the orchestra's music is very similar to Thai classical music. Sometimes, a conductor tells the elephants when to stop or start and sometimes they improvise, but all their music is original.

The orchestra made three albums of their music. They don't tour around the country because it isn't easy to transport 14 elephants. But you can hear their unusual live music at the Thai Elephant Conservation Center in Lampang, Thailand.

1. According to the text, what do animals like?

- a. drums
- b. touring around the country
- c. listening to music

2. How many elephant musicians are there today?

- a. five
- b. three
- c. fourteen

3. What instructions do they sometimes get?

- a. when to stop and start
- b. what to play
- c. how to hold the instruments

4. Why don't they tour around the country?

- a. because they are making an album of their music.
- b. because it's difficult to transport 14 elephants
- c. because it's unusual.
